

Drupal shows leadership on diversity and inclusion

By Rianne Schestowitz

Created 16/10/2019 - 7:48am

Submitted by Rianne Schestowitz on Wednesday 16th of October 2019 07:48:50 AM Filed under Interviews [1] Drupal [2]

Drupal is far from alone among open source communities with a diversity gap, and I think it deserves a lot of credit for tackling these issues head-on. Diversity and inclusion is a much broader topic than most of us realize. Before I read DDI's August newsletter, the history of indigenous people in my community was something that I hadn't really thought about before. Thanks to DDI's project, I'm not only aware of the people who lived in Maryland long before me, but I've come to appreciate and respect what they brought to this land.

I encourage you to learn about the native people in your homeland and record their history in DDI's Land Acknowledgements blog. If you're a member of another open source project, consider replicating this project there. The more we know about people who differ from us, the more we respect and appreciate our collective roles as members of the human race.

[3]

Interviews Drupal

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/119>

[2] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/126>

[3] <https://opensource.com/article/19/10/drupals-diversity-initiatives>