

Firefox 70 review - the inversion point?

By Rianne Schestowitz

Created 07/12/2019 - 10:44pm

Submitted by Rianne Schestowitz on Saturday 7th of December 2019 10:44:53 PM Filed under Moz/FF [1] Reviews [2]

I am happy that Mozilla has found some of its old identity, the one before it tried to cypasta Chrome. The privacy message resonates well with all that's been happening lately. So perhaps it's difficult to convince the Average Joe about memory consumption and perceived speed and such, but "they gonna git yo data" argument might stir an odd photon or two in a brain somewhere. When it comes to privacy, Firefox definitely leads the field, and this is a great selling point.

It's not everything of course, but the combination of a toned down message, the ability to change pretty much every setting, including the browser look & feel, do offer a sense of freedom in a world of diminishing liberties for consumers. Firefox 70 offers a nice bundle, and it might be the version that slowly brings the stray ones back to the fold. Hopefully. All in all, if you have reasons to like Firefox, version 70 should give you a dose of extra happiness. If you don't, it might be the version that makes you reconsider. From the most cheerful reviewer of software on the planet, goodbye.

[3]

Moz/FF Reviews

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/131402>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/118>

[2] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/101>

[3] <https://www.dedoimedo.com/computers/firefox-70.html>