

Can the Linux Foundation Speak for Free Software?

By Rianne Schestowitz

Created 21/01/2020 - 2:14pm

Submitted by Rianne Schestowitz on Tuesday 21st of January 2020 02:14:25 PM Filed under GNU [1] Linux [2]

The kindest interpretation of this situation is that the Linux Foundation has a public relations problem that it is unaware of and is overdue to correct. A more cynical interpretation is that, from its very start, the Linux Foundation has been a slow coup, gradually usurping an authority to which it has no right. Ask me on alternate days which one I believe.

Whatever the case, the solutions are the same. A concerted effort to get community members elected to at-large positions might help, although they would still be a minority. Many, too, might not want to legitimize the foundation by participating in it. A more promising response might be to see that community organizations are strengthened to provide a counter-balance, but that would be a slow solution if it worked at all.

I don't pretend to have an answer. But I believe that free software owes its success to the fact that it is diverse. Centralizing the authority in the community means an end to free software as we know it ? and that is something to be avoided at all cost. The very real good that the Linux Foundation does cannot disguise the harm that its orientation may cause.

[3]

GNU Linux

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/133154>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/144>

[2] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/63>

[3] <https://fossforce.com/2020/01/can-the-linux-foundation-speak-for-free-software/>