Released on September 2019, the GNOME 3.34 "Thessaloniki" desktop environment is the first to adopt a new release cycle with extended maintenance updates. Previous GNOME releases only received two maintenance updates during their support cycle.

Therefore, GNOME 3.34.4 is here as a minor bugfix release to GNOME 3.34, addressing various issues, as well as updating translations across several components and applications. Among the changes, there's a big GTK update with better Wayland support, VP8 encoding for the built-in screen-recorder, and another major Vala update.
