Summary: In terms of number of daily nodes, we're at the pinnacle still (despite slow news at times of lock-downs)*

T*ux Machines* is turning 16 exactly one month from now [2]. We've decided to plot activity over time, as measured by number of posts/nodes. It's not the most important measure (e.g. original articles), but it's something that's not too hard to plot.

Attached to this post is `tux-posts.txt`, which can be converted into `tux-numbers.txt` as follows:

```
sed 's/[\t ][\t ]*/ /g' tux-numbers.txt
```

We can then plot it:

```
gnuplot -p -e 'plot "./tux-numbers.txt" with linespoints linetype 1 pointtype 2 linecolor 10'
```

And voila!

In a month from now we might buy a cake. ?
