

8 Great Linux Apps Worth Bragging About, part 2

By srlinuxx

Created 27/05/2009 - 9:46pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Wednesday 27th of May 2009 09:46:44 PM Filed under Software [1]

Last week we took a look at four great Linux/FOSS applications that are as good as any of their competitors, FOSS or proprietary. Today I'll wrap up with four more fine applications that I think are excellent and bragworthy, and that have not already been reviewed to death:

gLabels Label, Business Card, and Postcard Creator

gLabels is a great lightweight, easy label and business card creator. You don't have to fire up big ponderous OpenOffice to create labels; by the time it opens you'll be sending your gLabels job to the printer. gLabels supports every Avery label and card template in existence, which is a lot, and you can create custom templates. With a bit of ingenuity you can also make invitations and greeting cards. Making a page of labels that are all the same takes a couple of minutes, and it also supports mail merge for doing mass mailings or other kinds of labels that you want to pull from a database. License: GPL.

rest here [2]

Software

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/36923>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/38>

[2] <http://www.linuxplanet.com/linuxplanet/reviews/6759/1/>