

Predictions for 2006: Operating systems

By srlinuxx

Created 08/01/2006 - 5:21am

Submitted by srlinuxx on Sunday 8th of January 2006 05:21:24 AM Filed under OS [1]

Microsoft says Windows Vista, its new client operating system, will be out in time for the 2006 holiday season. Given the company's history of ill-fated release predictions, it wouldn't be surprising to see a slip. But I think Windows Vista could make the late 2006 ship date.

Novell and Red Hat will continue to try to crack Microsoft's domination on the desktop, focusing on the cash-strapped public sector. Both have new desktop releases scheduled for next year.

The buzz around virtualisation will grow ever louder among corporate IT managers -- particularly among IT shops that have underutilised servers and are anxious to consolidate their hardware.

Full Article [2].

OS

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/4394>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/37>

[2] <http://www.techworld.com/opsys/features/index.cfm?featureid=2134&inkc=0>