It would appear that the OpenSolaris project is back on track. This is a bit long overdue. The acquisition of Sun by Oracle left a few projects in questionable states. It was unknown as to whether Oracle would continue supporting these open source projects. OpenSolaris was included in that list.

The great news is, Oracle locked down b134 (which can be obtained at Genunix). It is going to be build for internal testing and we are possibly looking at a May release. I sure do hope they clarify the release name and rename it from 2010.03 to 2010.05.
