My wife?s birthday was the other day and she had been wanting a MacBook to go with her iMac. Proprietary software is not my thing, but it makes her happy. Problem: nowhere near enough $ to buy one. Not enough $ to buy an iPad either (if they were even for sale here, that is). So we talked a bit and really she just wanted something portable for her games? and what I ended up doing was buying a cheap netbook (the older model MSI Wind U100) and started learning everything I could about making a ?hackintosh? out of it.

Now, when talking about what could (theoretically) be done, try not to sound too confident since you may just get asked to that in practice 😊 Basically, yes, it would be nice if she could run her XP games too and Ubuntu would be icing on the cake? so I started learning about how to make a triple-boot system.
