

Why Linux Should Not Get a Free Ride

By srlinuxx

Created 10/06/2010 - 10:09pm

Submitted by srlinuxx on Thursday 10th of June 2010 10:09:50 PM Filed under Linux [1]

I love Linux, I love FLOSS. I love the ideas behind them, and what drives the community. I love that Linux Distro's are more user friendly than their competitors. I love how they work, I love how much better the kernel is than anything else out there.

Why am I so critical during my reviews then?

Certainly A Free Product Needs a Break?

Often when someone critiques a linux distro in a forum a retort along the lines of 'well if you want $X or $Y you can pay for Windows, you get $distro for free?'

Wrong. Right there the Linux community states clearly 'we are not good enough, and like some knock off product you should expect to get what you pay for, or go get the real thing.'

rest here [2]

Linux

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/45793>

Links:

[1] <http://www.tuxmachines.org/taxonomy/term/63>

[2] <http://g33q.co.za/2010/06/10/opinion-why-linux-should-not-get-a-free-ride/>