OpenOffice.org is a huge lumbering beast.

Don't get us wrong, we like it in principle and the practice is steadily getting better, but there's still room for improvement.

Here are 20 things we'd change about it to make it better.

01. Improve the loading speed

This is almost a standing joke, but OpenOffice.org does take a while to load. It isn't a big issue when you're spending a fair amount of time on one document, but the delay is annoying when you just want to open an email attachment or make a quick change.
