

Henry's Tech Advice #3 - Python Functions

By srlinuxx

Created 26/05/2006 - 10:44am

Submitted by srlinuxx on Friday 26th of May 2006 10:44:37 AM

My name is Henry the Adequate, and I am a superhero. Felinn asks, In python, how do you call functions? Also, is there an ni function?

First, you need a function coordinator. This is a person who organizes the whole thing - the band, food, seating, comedy breasts, and other stuff like that. More importantly, this is also the person who gets the blame when things go badly.

Next you need to yell loudly at the function coordinator whenever (s)he tries to do anything, or tries not to do anything, or makes any kind of suggestion, or comes at all close to attempting to do (s)her job. After all, that's what you hired them for.

Full Story [1].

Source URL: <http://www.tuxmachines.org/node/7164>

Links:

[1] <http://weblog.henrytheadquate.com/?p=355>